SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.

BLOW AT THE HEART.

A new battle in the West, says The Times, is daily more intense. Plainly the enemy feels that the time has come to make a blow. At any price the British Armies must be checked till the main defensive positions are reached. Drocourt and Quessant are ready to meet the defence. If they are not held, if the French reinforcements are not sent, the British are attacked before they are ready. Under these circumstances, the British must be prepared to meet the attack.

and the Germans, and they may find it hard to stand in all its breadth. Lens then, it would certainly fall to the Allies. Lens, the German line, with all the districts which it keeps in captivity, in jeopardy; and south the enemy hold St. Quentin or the steep Caen, or keep the French from carrying them above the Aisne, and from going into the downward-lying country to the west. This blow at the heart of the German in the West inspired his commander yesterday to the language of his communique: he dealt with in an official statement issued by the War Office last night pronounces it to be "the most ac-education we have yet had of the of the German Army and people." A Back after counter-attack has great weight and with the men. More than once our thin protected new-gun positions to fall back. But it has come on again, and the bloodiest fighting in we rest in possession and the enemy has suffered than we have. This fighting seemed to apply to everywhere our first rush was made. The two battalions of Garcelle took the first assault of the Rhinelanders, and were over-attacked when they were under heavy fire, and one battalion has been almost wiped out. The other is now completely shattered. The advance is estimated at about 4,000 yards, and the advance to attack from the Bois du Sart, directly east of the first position, is expected to be met by the enemy to bits by the second attack. It is thought that the knock is fighting at any time this year.

A SIX YEARS' POSSIBILITY.

The present bill proposes to make an additional increase in the area of the land to be taken in the next six years. What we can do in these six years depends on a number of considerations, but we do not see how we can substantially increase the area.

See for yourself how Sanatogen will benefit your Nerves

Experiments on Human Subjects by a Harley Street Physician and an Oxford Professor of Physiology

Scientific Proof that Six Weeks' use of Sanatogen Increases Nerve-Nutrition by 63 per cent. and General Bodily Nutrition by 48 per cent.

SUPPOSE you took 20 Grammes of Sanatogen daily for six weeks, and allowed two experts to test its action on your body by the most exacting tests known to you—First they could prove to you that Sanatogen had greatly increased the phosphorus in your system from which nerve energy is derived; and this would explain the remarkable feeling of vigour and buoyancy which Sanatogen imparts.

Then they could measure a concurrent gain in your "nitrogen assimilation," proving that your whole body was being nourished and therefore healthier and stronger, without any addition to your ordinary diet.

Finally, they could show you, through a high-power microscope, how Sanatogen re-builds the impoverished blood and nerve cells, without stimulation, re-action, or any ill-effects.

These are not imaginary experiments; they have been made with recent years' scientific methods, and are thoroughly and impartially attested by the highest standards; the results may therefore be accepted as proven scientific certainties.

In the first two experiments—made by a distinguished London physician and an Oxford Professor of Physiology—Sanatogen was increased by 63 per cent. (see diagram) and nitrogen by 48 per cent.

As Professor Fraser Harris writes: "Nerve energy must come from assimilated phosphorus," hence the strengthening power of Sanatogen is no less notable than its nutritive, body-building action.

Nerves under the Microscope.

The remaining experiments, published in the Lancet, were made on both human and animal subjects by an eminent Anglo-American Scientist (formerly Assistant Professor of Physiology at Oxford University), and have been fully explained in a previous announcement.

We publish here illustrations showing how debilitated nerve cells and fibres repair themselves by a natural physiological process, and are thus renewed and strengthened.
